

A method and apparatus which provides for remote and secure access to a host computer, and which further provides an open application standard for client access to the host computer.